How to reach Trento:

By plane

Unfortunately Trento does not have a city airport, so you will have to choose among the following options. At a distance of between 40 minutes and 2,5 hours you have plenty of landing options, all served also by low-cost airlines:

Verona Catullo Airport - 90 km from Trento: this airport is the best option to reach Trento, with direct flight connections only with the main European and some low-costs airports. The airport has a shuttle bus service with quick and frequent connections to the railway station of Verona. From there it takes about one hour to reach Trento by train. It is also possible to take a taxi directly from the airport to Trento, but it will be quite expensive (about 160 euros). If you are travelling by car from Verona airport, take the motorway A22, direction Brennero, from the entrance Verona nord.

Bologna, G. Marconi airport - 227 km. From the airport take a short ride on a shuttle service / urban bus to the train station, from which there are direct trains to Trento; it takes about 2 hours to reach Trento. By car take the A14 motorway direction Bologna, then the A1 motorway, direction Milano and finally the A22 motorway, direction Brennero.
Treviso-Venezia, Canova airport - 135km from Trento. The airport is very close to the city center and is connected to the train station (Treviso Centrale) by a shuttle bus. From there, you can reach Trento by train via Verona or Castelfranco Veneto and Bassano del Grappa (Valsugana railway). The journey lasts approximately 3 hours.

Venezia Marco Polo - 125 km: the airport is connected to the nearby railway stations of Venice-Santa Lucia and Mestre-Venice by scheduled urban bus services. It takes about two hours and a half to reach Trento from Venice (most of the times you have to change in Verona). By car take the SS14 and then continue on A27, take the exit direction Milano/Bologna and continue on motorway A4 Milano-Venezia, direction Milano. After 70 km take the exit Brennero/Verona direction Brennero and take the A22.

Milano Linate - 245 km: the shuttle service, with buses departing every 30 minutes, will take you to the central railway station of Milano (Milano Centrale) in about 20 minutes and from there you can take the train via Verona. Trains to Verona are frequent and they reach it in about one hour and a half. By car take motorway A4 Milano/Venezia direction Venezia. After 100 km take the exit Peschiera and follow direction to A22 motorway. Take the A22, direction Brennero.

Milano Malpensa – 300 km: this is the largest intercontinental airport in Northern Italy. From Malpensa there is a shuttle service to Milano Centrale station; it takes about 50 min to reach it. By car take the SS336 road direction A8 Milano. Then take the Tangenziale nord, direction Venezia and then take the A4 motorway, direction Venezia. After 100 km take the Peschiera exit and follow direction to A22 motorway, direction Brennero.

Bergamo, Orio al Serio airport – 185 km, this is a very well served low-cost airport close to Milano. From the airport there is a shuttle service to Milano Centrale or a bus to Bergamo; it takes about 50 minutes to get there.

Roma – Fiumicino Airport – 592 km. Despite Rome being quite far from Trento, flying in and out of the Italian capital could be an option, particularly if you are travelling on intercontinental flights. From Fiumicino there is a shuttle train (Leonardo Express) to the central railway station of Rome (Roma Termini). It takes 30 minutes to get there. From this station there are three daily high-speed trains reaching Trento in four hours and several other options (via Bologna-Verona) that take about five hours and a half.

Bolzano - 60 km: this is a small airport close to Trento. There is a bus stop 600 meters far from the airport that will take you to the railway station in town. There are direct trains from Bolzano to Trento almost every half an hour and it takes from 30 to 50 minutes. If you are travelling by car, just take the motorway A22, direction Modena (entrance Bolzano sud). After 45 km take the exit Trento nord and follow the SS12 road, direction centro.

Innsbruck airport – 170 km: an Austrian airport with a direct train link to Trento. It is well connected with Lufthansa and its network airlines. There is a bus line from the airport to the central train station, where DB-ÖBB trains will take you directly to Trento in 2:30 hours. You may also look at the Munich international airport, as there are direct train connections at reasonable prices to Trento (4,5 h).
By train

There are two main lines that reach Trento: the Brennero line (from Rome to Innsbruck to Munich) and the Valsugana line (from Venice to Trento). From Venice it may be faster to take a train to Verona and then from Verona to Trento. For information on train connections, go to the following website: Ferrovie dello Stato (online purchase of Italian-owned trains) or DBahn (online purchase of Austro-German owned trains), both offering advance purchase fares.
