Jessica Maucione focuses on contemporary American literature, film, and popular culture to address narratives that separate the human species along manufactured racial lines and to discuss texts that celebrate white characters and dehumanize black and brown characters.